MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

This case is substantially similar to Levin v. Citibank, N.A., C-09-0350 MMC (“Levin Action”), a case pending before Judge Chesney in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California (“Northern District”). Both cases: (i) challenge Citibank, N.A. (“Citibank”)’s individual decisions, pursuant to the parties’ contracts, to reduce or suspend its customers’ home equity lines of credit (“HELOCs”) based on a decline in home value; (ii) raise nearly identical claims; and (iii) have substantially similar putative classes.

However, Levin filed his complaint in January 2009 and, as a result, the Levin Court has already made some important, substantive rulings in the case. Indeed, Citibank filed a motion to dismiss the Levin Action (Doc. Nos. 30 & 31), the Court entered an order dismissing substantial portions of the Levin complaint (Doc. No. 57) (attached as Exhibit (“Ex”) A to the Declaration of Debra Bogo-Ernst (“Bogo-Ernst Decl.”) filed concurrently herewith), Levin filed an amended complaint (Doc. No. 59), and Citibank filed a second motion to dismiss (Doc. No. 60). Citibank’s second motion to dismiss the Levin Action will be fully briefed by the end of February, 2010. In contrast, Mark Winkler filed this action in September 2009 (the “Winkler Action” or this “Action”). Defendants Citigroup Inc., CitiMortgage, Inc. and Citibank (collectively “Defendants”) are moving to dismiss this Action concurrently herewith based on many of the same legal principles that Judge Chesney has already considered and applied in the Levin Action.

Because of the substantial overlap in issues between the Winkler and Levin cases, the similarity in putative classes, and the fact that the Northern District has already analyzed many of these same issues, Defendants respectfully request that this Court transfer the Winkler Action to the Northern District pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). Section 1404’s requirements for transfer are met: (1) the transfer would be in the interest of justice and convenient for the parties and the witnesses; and (2) the action might have been brought in the Northern District of California.

II. BACKGROUND

On January 26, 2009, David Levin filed a putative class action complaint in the Northern District against Citibank. The initial Levin complaint (the “Levin Complaint”) alleged that Citibank’s actions regarding the suspension or reduction of his HELOC violated the Truth In Lending Act (“TILA”) and Regulation Z, breached his contract, violated California’s Unfair Competition Law (Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200) (“UCL”), breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and constituted fraudulent concealment. See Levin Complaint (attached to the Bogo-Ernst Decl. as Ex. B).

Almost nine months later, Mark Winkler filed a nearly identical putative class action complaint in this district alleging all but one of the claims alleged by Levin. As shown below, Winkler simply substituted a fraudulent concealment claim for an unjust enrichment claim:

Claim	Levin	Winkler
Declaratory Relief Under TILA and Regulation Z	Count I	Count I
Violation of the TILA and Regulation Z	Count II	Count II
Breach of Contract	Count III	Count III
Violation of California’s UCL	Counts IV, VII, IX, XI	Count VI
Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing	Counts V, VIII, X	Count IV
Fraudulent Concealment	Count VI	n/a
Unjust Enrichment	n/a	Count V

In the Levin Action, Judge Chesney dismissed Counts I, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, and X of Levin’s Complaint and also dismissed Counts IV and XI to the extent that they included a claim for injunctive relief. (Doc. 57, Bogo-Ernst Decl., Ex. A). By way of an example of the

1 dismissed claims, Levin – like Winkler – alleged that he terminated the HELOC after Citibank
 2 reduced his credit limit. Without a contractual relationship or purported future harm, Judge
 3 Chesney dismissed Levin’s declaratory relief claim. Id. at 3-4. Here, Winkler’s claim fails on 4 the same basis. See Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss Winkler’s Complaint, filed concurrently
 5 herewith. This is just one example demonstrating the dramatic overlap between Levin’s and 6 Winkler’s claims.

7 Not only do Winkler and Levin have nearly identical claims, but they also purport to act
 8 on behalf of a substantially similar putative class: all Citibank customers who had a HELOC
 9 reduced by Citibank based on a decline in home values. Compare Levin Complaint, ¶ 22 with 10 Winkler Complaint, ¶ 26; see also id. (listing four similar subclasses). This intersecting class 11 definition could raise significant issues later if these cases are not handled together.

12 Given the striking resemblance in allegations and class definitions, and for the reasons
 13 discussed below, Defendants respectfully move to transfer the Winkler Action to the Northern 14 District.

15 III. ARGUMENT

16 “[A] district court may transfer any civil action to any other district or division where it 17 might have been brought” “in the interest of justice” and “[f]or the convenience of parties and 18 witnesses.” 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). “The purpose of § 1404(a) ‘is to prevent the waste of time,
 19 energy and money and to protect litigants, witnesses and the public against unnecessary 20 inconvenience and expense.’” Saleh v. Titan Corp., 361 F. Supp. 2d 1152, 1155 (S.D. Cal.
 21 2005), quoting Van Dusen v. Barrack, 376 U.S. 612, 616 (1964). To transfer a case under 22 Section 1404, two requirements must be met: (1) “the transfer is ‘[f]or the convenience of 23 parties and witnesses, in the interest of justice,’” and (2) “the district to which the defendant 24 seeks to have the action transferred is one in which the action ‘might have been brought.’”
 25 Saleh, 361 F. Supp. 2d at 1155. As discussed below, these requirements are met, and the 26 Winkler Action should be transferred to the Northern District.

1 A. The Interests of Justice and the Convenience of the Parties and Witnesses
 2 Favor Transfer to the Northern District of California.

3 As discussed below, federal courts consider both “public” and “private” factors in 4 analyzing Section 1404’s requirement that the interests of justice and convenience of the parties
 5 be served by a transfer to another district. Adachi v. Carlyle/Galaxy San Pedro L.P., 595 F.
 6 Supp. 2d 1147, 1151 (S.D. Cal. 2009). Here, both the public and the private factors demonstrate 7 that the Winkler Action should be transferred to the Northern District.

8 1. The Public Factors Favor Transfer to the Northern District.

9 The following “public” factors are important in analyzing whether transfer to another 10 district is appropriate: (i) the interest of justice, including “the issues relative to judicial 11 economy;” (ii) “relative docket congestion;” and (iii) “the local public and jury pool’s interest in 12 the controversy.” Adachi, 595 F. Supp. 2d at 1151. Here, the interest of justice requires that this 13 Action be transferred to the Northern District while the remaining public factors are neutral. The 14 actions are substantially related, there is a risk of inconsistent results if the actions are handled
 15 separately, and Judge Chesney already has a level of expertise and experience with the legal and 16 factual issues alleged in these cases.

17 a. Considerations of the Interest of Justice, Including Judicial 18 Economy, Strongly Favor Transfer.

19 “The interest of justice factor is the most important of all. Consideration of the interest of 20 justice, which includes judicial economy, may be determinative to a particular transfer motion, 21 even if the convenience of the parties and witnesses might call for a different result.”
 22 Amazon.com v. Cendant Corp., 404 F. Supp. 2d 1256, 1261 (W.D. Wash. 2005) (internal citation 23 and quotation omitted). Here, this factor undeniably weighs in favor of transfer of this Action to 24 the Northern District.

25 First, the Southern District has stated that “[t]he pendency of related actions in the 26 transferee forum is a significant factor in considering the interest of justice.” Jolly v. Purdue
 27 Pharma L.P., No. 05-CV-1452H, 2005 WL 2439197, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 28, 2005). Indeed, 28

1 “[l]itigation of related claims in the same tribunal is strongly favored because it facilitates
 2 efficient, economical and expeditious pre-trial proceedings and discovery and avoid duplicitous
 3 (sic) litigation and inconsistent results.” Id. See also Szegedy v. Keystone Food Prod., Inc., No.
 4 CV 08-5369 CAS (FFMx), 2009 WL 2767683, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 26, 2009) (“To permit a 5 situation in which two cases involving precisely the same issues are simultaneously pending in 6 different District Courts leads to the wastefulness of time, energy and money that § 1404(a) was 7 designed to prevent.”); Mussetter Distrib., Inc., No. CIV 09-1442 WBS EFB 2009 WL 1992356, 8 at *4 (E.D. Cal. July 8, 2009) (“In addition to the ‘possible consolidation of discovery’ and the 9 conservation of ‘time, energy and money,’ centralizing the adjudication of similar cases will also 10 ‘avoid the possibility of inconsistent judgments.’”) (citation omitted). “As a general rule, cases 11 [like Winkler] should be transferred to districts where related actions are pending.” Morrow v.
 12 Vertical Doors Inc., No. 09-0256-PHX-DGC, 2009 WL 1698560, at *5 (D. Ariz. June 17, 2009)
 13 (citation omitted).

14 Here, it cannot be disputed that these cases are related. As discussed supra at pp. 2-3, 15 Levin and Winkler allege nearly identical claims on behalf of substantially similar putative 16 classes. Both Levin and Winkler bring claims under TILA and Regulation Z, UCL, their 17 HELOC agreements, and the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The main but 18 insignificant difference is that Winkler substitutes an unjust enrichment/restitution claim for 19 Levin’s fraudulent concealment claim. In addition, Winkler and Levin both purport to act on 20 behalf of a substantially similar putative class: all Citibank customers who had a HELOC
 21 reduced by Citibank based on a decline in home values. Compare Levin Complaint, ¶ 22 with 22 Winkler Complaint, ¶ 26. Discovery would be substantially similar in both cases, and it would 23 make things more efficient for all concerned if these cases moved forward together.
 24 Accordingly, transfer is appropriate. See Mussetter Distrib., Inc., 2009 WL 1992356, at *4
 25 (transferring due to “substantial overlap,” “[d]espite some isolated differences”); Amazon.com v.
 26 Cendant Corp., 404 F. Supp. 2d 1256, 1261 (W.D. Wash. 2005) (transferring where two cases 27 were “similar enough that they should be considered by the same court”) (emphasis added).

1 Second, transferring this Action to the Northern District also reduces the risk of 2 inconsistent results. Jolly v. Purdue Pharma L.P., No. 05-CV-1452H, 2005 WL 2439197, at *2
 3 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 28, 2005) (noting that related claims in the same court avoids inconsistent
 4 results). If these cases were to proceed in different districts, it is likely that both courts would be 5 considering the same issues of law, including whether class certification of substantially similar 6 putative classes is appropriate. Even slight differences in such decisions could have an 7 enormous impact on the purported classes.

8 Third, a strong basis for transfer exists where the transferee district has “developed a 9 level of expertise and experience with th[e] particular factual background and legal issues in th[e] 10 related] case.” Jolly, 2005 WL 2439197, at *3. For instance, the Szegedy court transferred an 11 action to a district where an earlier-filed action was pending. The cases “contain[ed] identical
 12 factual allegations” and “assert[ed] claims under [the same state’s] law.” Szegedy, 2009 WL
 13 2767683, at *5. There, the judge in the transferee district was, at the time of the motion to 14 transfer, “considering a motion to dismiss filed by defendants,” was “already familiar with the 15 facts and law surrounding this case, and [wa]s more familiar with the parties and issues raised.”
 16 Id. The court ordered a transfer because, “although [the case in the other district] may involve 17 some different legal theories compared to the instant action, it involves similar, if not identical, 18 facts and issues.” Id. at 6.

19 Like Szegedy, this Action should be transferred to the Northern District, where Judge 20 Chesney is “already familiar with the facts and law surrounding th[e] case.” Id. at 5. Levin and 21 Winkler also raise substantially similar legal issues (TILA and Regulation Z, breach of contract,
 22 California Business and Professional Code, and breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair
 23 dealing). Id. Moreover, Judge Chesney has not only considered the Levin motion to dismiss, 24 like the transferee judge in Szegedy, but Judge Chesney has also decided the Levin motion to 25 dismiss, which demonstrates that she has developed an even greater familiarity with the issues
 26 and facts than the Szegedy judge. Id. In addition, in the Levin case, the court has reviewed three 27 sets of Case Management Statements and held a Case Management conference, and the parties 28

1 have participated in three ADR Conferences. For all of these reasons, this Action should be
 2 transferred to the Northern District. Id. See also Morrow, 2009 WL 1698560, at *5 (“As a
 3 general rule, cases should be transferred to districts where related actions are pending . . . [even 4 despite] different parties, so long as there are common issues of fact and/or law.”) (citation 5 omitted).

6 b. The Remaining Public Factors are Neutral.

7 The judicial economy factor is enough to establish that this Action should be transferred 8 to the Northern District. Morrow, 2009 WL 1698560, at *5 (the judicial economy factor can 9 “weigh[] decisively in favor of transfer”). However, courts will also consider additional public 10 factors such as “relative docket congestion” and “the local public and jury pool’s interest in the 11 controversy.” Adachi, 595 F. Supp. 2d at 1151. Here, these remaining public factors are neutral 12 and do not overcome — and in one instance even bolster — the strong showing that the judicial 13 economy factor weighs heavily in favor of transfer of this Action to the Northern District.

14 First, considerations of docket congestion are neutral because there is no distinct 15 difference in the congestion of the Northern and Southern Districts. Even though “[c]ongestion 16 in the civil docket of the Southern District is lower than the Northern District, . . . [the Southern 17 District’s] dramatically heavier criminal docket renders the advantages of transfer on grounds of 18 court congestions at best a marginal note in favor of the Southern District.” Ellis v. Costco
 19 Wholesale Corp., 372 F. Supp. 2d 530, 544 (N.D. Cal. 2005). Moreover, the congestion of both 20 the Northern and Southern Districts is well-recognized. See Nai-Chao v. Boeing Co., 555 F.
 21 Supp. 9, 19 (N.D. Cal. 1982) (“It is beyond dispute that the docket of this Court is heavily 22 congested.”); Saleh, 361 F. Supp. 2d at 1167 (recognizing the “docket congestion that the 23 Southern District of California experiences”). Thus, docket congestion, when considered in 24 isolation, does not weigh in favor of either party. See Flores v. Zale Delaware, Inc., No. C07-25 0539TEH, 2007 WL 4462992, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 17, 2007) (where “there is no evidence that 26 court congestion or average time to trial differs significantly between” districts, the congestion 27 factor “do[es] not weigh in favor of either party”). That said, the fact that two substantially 28

1 similar cases are pending in two federal districts with congested dockets demonstrates the 2 importance of the judicial economy factor, which as, discussed above, weighs heavily in favor of 3 transfer of this Action to the Northern District.

4 Second, neither the local public nor the jury pool in this district has a greater interest in 5 the Action than the public or jury pool in any other district. “Where, as here, the [putative] class 6 is nationwide and has no unique local interest or contact with the transferring district, the 7 deference usually accorded by courts to the plaintiff’s choice of venue is less important.”
 8 Genden v. Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 621 F. Supp. 780, 782 (N.D. Ill. 1985)
 9 (emphasis added). Here, the purported class has putative members and properties located 10 throughout the country. Accordingly, the local public factors are not determinative. See, e.g., 11 Saleh, 361 F. Supp. 2d at 1167 (finding a lack of “localized controversy” where plaintiffs did not 12 reside in the district and the events underlying the action did not occur in the district).

13 In summary and in consideration of all the public factors discussed above, the Court
 14 should transfer this Action to the Northern District.

15 2. The Private Factors Demonstrate That Transfer to the Northern 16 District is Appropriate.

17 In analyzing the appropriateness of a transfer, “[p]rivate factors to be considered include
 18 the location where the operative events occurred, the convenience of the parties and non-party
 19 witnesses, the location of relevant evidence, the availability of compulsory process, and other 20 practical considerations for the efficient and cost-effective resolution of claims.” Adachi, 595 F.
 21 Supp. 2d at 1151. As shown below, consideration of the private factors demonstrates that 22 transfer of this Action to the Northern District is appropriate.

23 a. Location Where the Operative Events Occurred.

24 The “operative events” in this Action are the reduction or suspension of the purported 25 class members’ HELOCs. These individuals and the properties securing their HELOCs are 26 located across the country. Accordingly, the locations where the “operative events” at issue in 27 this Action occurred are scattered across the country. Moreover, Levin’s and Winkler’s personal 28

1 allegations demonstrate that “operative events” took place in both the Northern and Southern 2 Districts of California. Because both “operative events” occurred in both the Northern and 3 Southern District, and many other federal districts nationwide, this factor is neutral.

4 b. Convenience of the Parties and Non-Party Witnesses.

5 Winkler brought a putative class action. In considering the convenience of the parties, 6 “when an individual brings a derivative suit or represents a class, the named plaintiff’s choice of 7 forum is given less weight.” Lou v. Belzberg, 834 F.2d 730, 739 (9th Cir. 1987). See also Saleh,
 8 361 F. Supp. 2d at 1167 (holding that “plaintiffs’ choice of forum is entitled to less deference
 9 than it might otherwise be” because “plaintiffs are foreign plaintiffs bringing a class action
 10 lawsuit”); Gerin v. Aegon USA Inc., No. C 06-5407 SBA 2007 WL 1033472, at *3 (N.D. Cal.
 11 Apr. 4, 2007) (“plaintiff’s choice of forum receives only minimal deference when the plaintiff 12 brings a purported class action”) (citation omitted). Thus, even though Plaintiff resides in the 13 Southern District of California (Compl. at ¶ 14), his choice of forum is entitled to less weight
 14 than a typical plaintiff’s choice, because he is a putative class action plaintiff. Moreover, it 15 would be more convenient for Defendants’ witnesses to travel to the Northern District for the 16 earlier-filed Levin Action, which involves a substantially similar putative class and nearly 17 identical claims.

18 “When considering the convenience to witnesses, the convenience of non-party witnesses
 19 is the more important factor. The Court should consider not only how many witnesses each side 20 may have, but also the relative importance of their testimony.” Amazon.com, 404 F. Supp. 2d at 21 1260 (internal citations and quotations omitted). Here, too, to the extent that any non-party
 22 witnesses will be called, it is likely that these witnesses will overlap in both cases. As such, it 23 would be more convenient for those potential non-party witnesses to travel to only one federal 24 district—the Northern District, where the first-filed Levin Action is pending—rather than two 25 districts.

c. Location of the Evidence.

The location of potential evidence in this case is not determinative of whether transfer is appropriate. Other than the individual documents and circumstances associated with Winkler's and Levin's loans, any other potential evidence is likely located outside of California. For example, because the individual properties securing the putative class members' HELOCs are located nationwide in both cases, any evidence related to these claims will not be confined to California.

d. Availability of Compulsory Process.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 45(b)(2) permits a subpoena to be served anywhere within the district of the court by which it is issued, or within 100 miles of the place of trial. Both the Northern and Southern Districts, like all federal districts, are bound by this rule. Thus, because compulsory process is available under Rule 45(b)(2) in both districts, this factor is neutral to the transfer analysis.

e. Miscellaneous Private Factors.

Under the "private factors" analysis, courts also consider "other practical considerations for the efficient and cost-effective resolution of claims." Adachi, 595 F. Supp. 2d at 1151. Here, as discussed at Section I(A)(1), supra, it will be more efficient and cost-effective for Defendants to litigate these two related HELOC cases in the same forum—especially if the cases were to be consolidated. See Amazon.com, 404 F. Supp. 2d at 1262 ("the feasibility of . . . consolidation is a factor that this Court may consider in deciding whether to allow a transfer."). Many aspects of the litigation could be streamlined, including case management, discovery and briefing on class certification and other issues. Transfer and consolidation would also reduce the risk of inconsistent results. Further, if this Action were consolidated with the Levin Action, the parties would benefit from the progress of the Levin Action, which has already undergone the briefing and disposition of a motion to dismiss and early case management. See Morrow, 2009 WL 1698560, at *5 (transferring where the transferee court previously "invested significant judicial resources” in a related case). Accordingly, these other practical considerations strongly weigh in favor of transfer of the Action to the Northern District.

In summary, the vast majority of the public and private factors either heavily favor transfer or are neutral. In particular, the interest of justice conclusively demonstrates that transfer is appropriate under these circumstances. See Amazon.com, 404 F. Supp. 2d at 1261 (“The interest of justice factor is the most important of all. Consideration of the interest of justice, which includes judicial economy, may be determinative to a particular transfer motion, even if the convenience of the parties and witnesses might call for a different result.”) (internal citation and quotations omitted). Accordingly, the Winkler Action should be transferred to the Northern District.

B. This Action “Might Have Been Brought” in the Northern District of California.

The second requirement considered in a Section 1404 transfer analysis is whether the action “might have been brought” in the transferee jurisdiction. An action “might have been brought” in any forum that would have personal and subject matter jurisdiction over the action and where venue is proper. Amazon.com v. Cendant Corp., 404 F. Supp. 2d 1256, 1259 (W.D. Wash. 2005). The jurisdiction and venue allegations in Winkler’s Complaint apply equally to establish jurisdiction and venue in the Northern District.

First, the Northern District would have personal jurisdiction over Defendants. Plaintiff’s Complaint alleges that the Southern District “has personal jurisdiction over Citi under California Code Civil Procedure § 410.10 because some of the acts alleged herein were committed in California . . . and because Citi are [sic] registered to do business in this state and actively conduct [sic] business in” the Southern District. Compl. at ¶ 13. The same allegations establish personal jurisdiction in the Northern District.

Second, the Northern District, like the Southern District, would have subject matter jurisdiction over this Action under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d) (because this Action brings class claims that purportedly exceed the sum or value of $5 million); 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (federal questions

1 arise under 15 U.S.C. § 1647 and 12 C.F.R. § 226.5b); and 28 U.S.C. § 1367 (supplemental 2 subject matter jurisdiction over pendant state claims) based on Plaintiff's allegations. Compl. at 3 ¶ 10.

4 Finally, venue is proper in the Northern District. Under the federal venue statutes, "[a] 5 civil action wherein jurisdiction is not founded solely on diversity of citizenship may, except as 6 otherwise provided by law, be brought only in . . . a judicial district where any defendant resides,
 7 if all defendants reside in the same State" 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(1). Further, "[f]or purposes 8 of venue under this chapter, a defendant that is a corporation shall be deemed to reside in any 9 judicial district in which it is subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is 10 commenced." 28 U.S.C. § 1391(c). As described above, Defendants are subject to personal 11 jurisdiction in the Northern District. Because the Northern District has personal jurisdiction over 12 Defendants, Defendants will be deemed to "reside" in the Northern District for purposes of 13 venue under Section 1391(c). Finally, because the Northern District is "a judicial district where 14 [Defendants] reside[]," venue in that forum is proper under Section 1391(b)(1).

15 Thus, this Action "might have been brought" in the Northern District, which satisfies the 16 second Section 1404(a) requirement.

17 IV. CONCLUSION

18 Because both requirements of 28 U.S.C. § 1404 are met, Defendants respectfully request
 19 that this Court transfer this Action to the Northern District of California.
